Leading Academic Medical Center Partnership

Client Profile

The Leading Academic Medical Center (LAMC), a renowned academic medical center, faced challenges in recruiting candidates for crucial allied health roles. They aimed to provide exceptional patient care, advance medical research, and foster diversity and inclusion in their workforce.

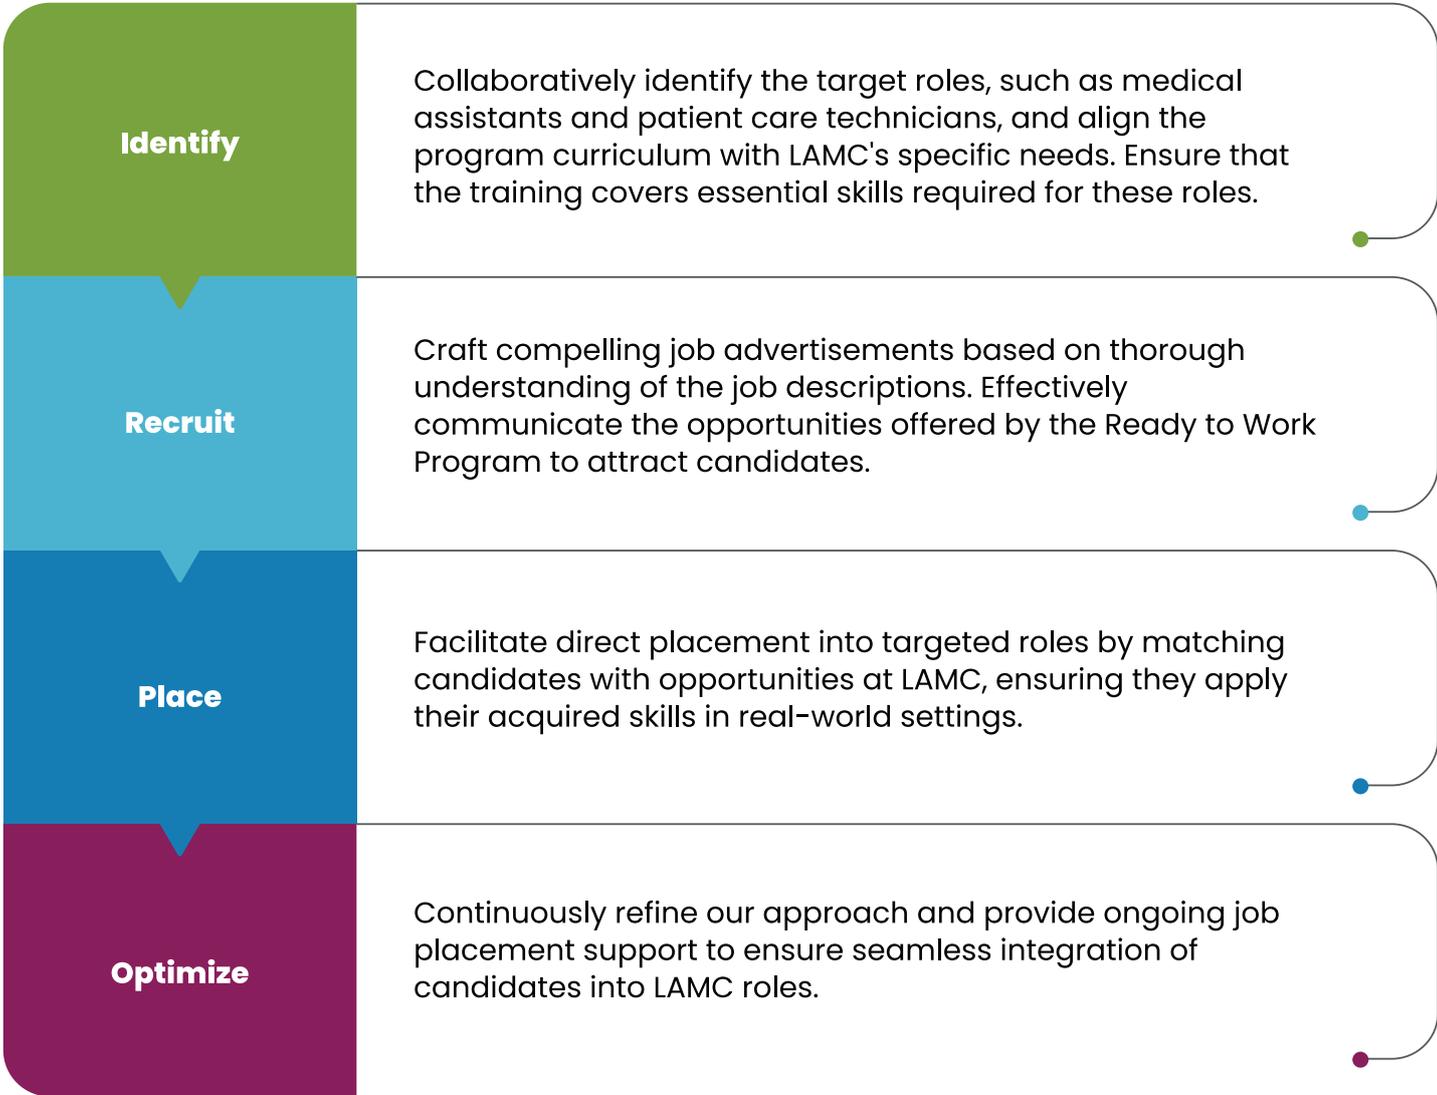

Challenge

LAMC struggled to attract and hire individuals for medical assistant and patient care technician roles. They needed a solution to meet their staffing needs while maintaining high standards of care.

Ready to Work Solution

To address their talent acquisition challenges, LAMC partnered with UMass Global and WeLearn to implement the Ready to Work Program. This program focused on reskilling individuals from the local community for healthcare roles. Candidates received comprehensive training and job placement support at no cost.

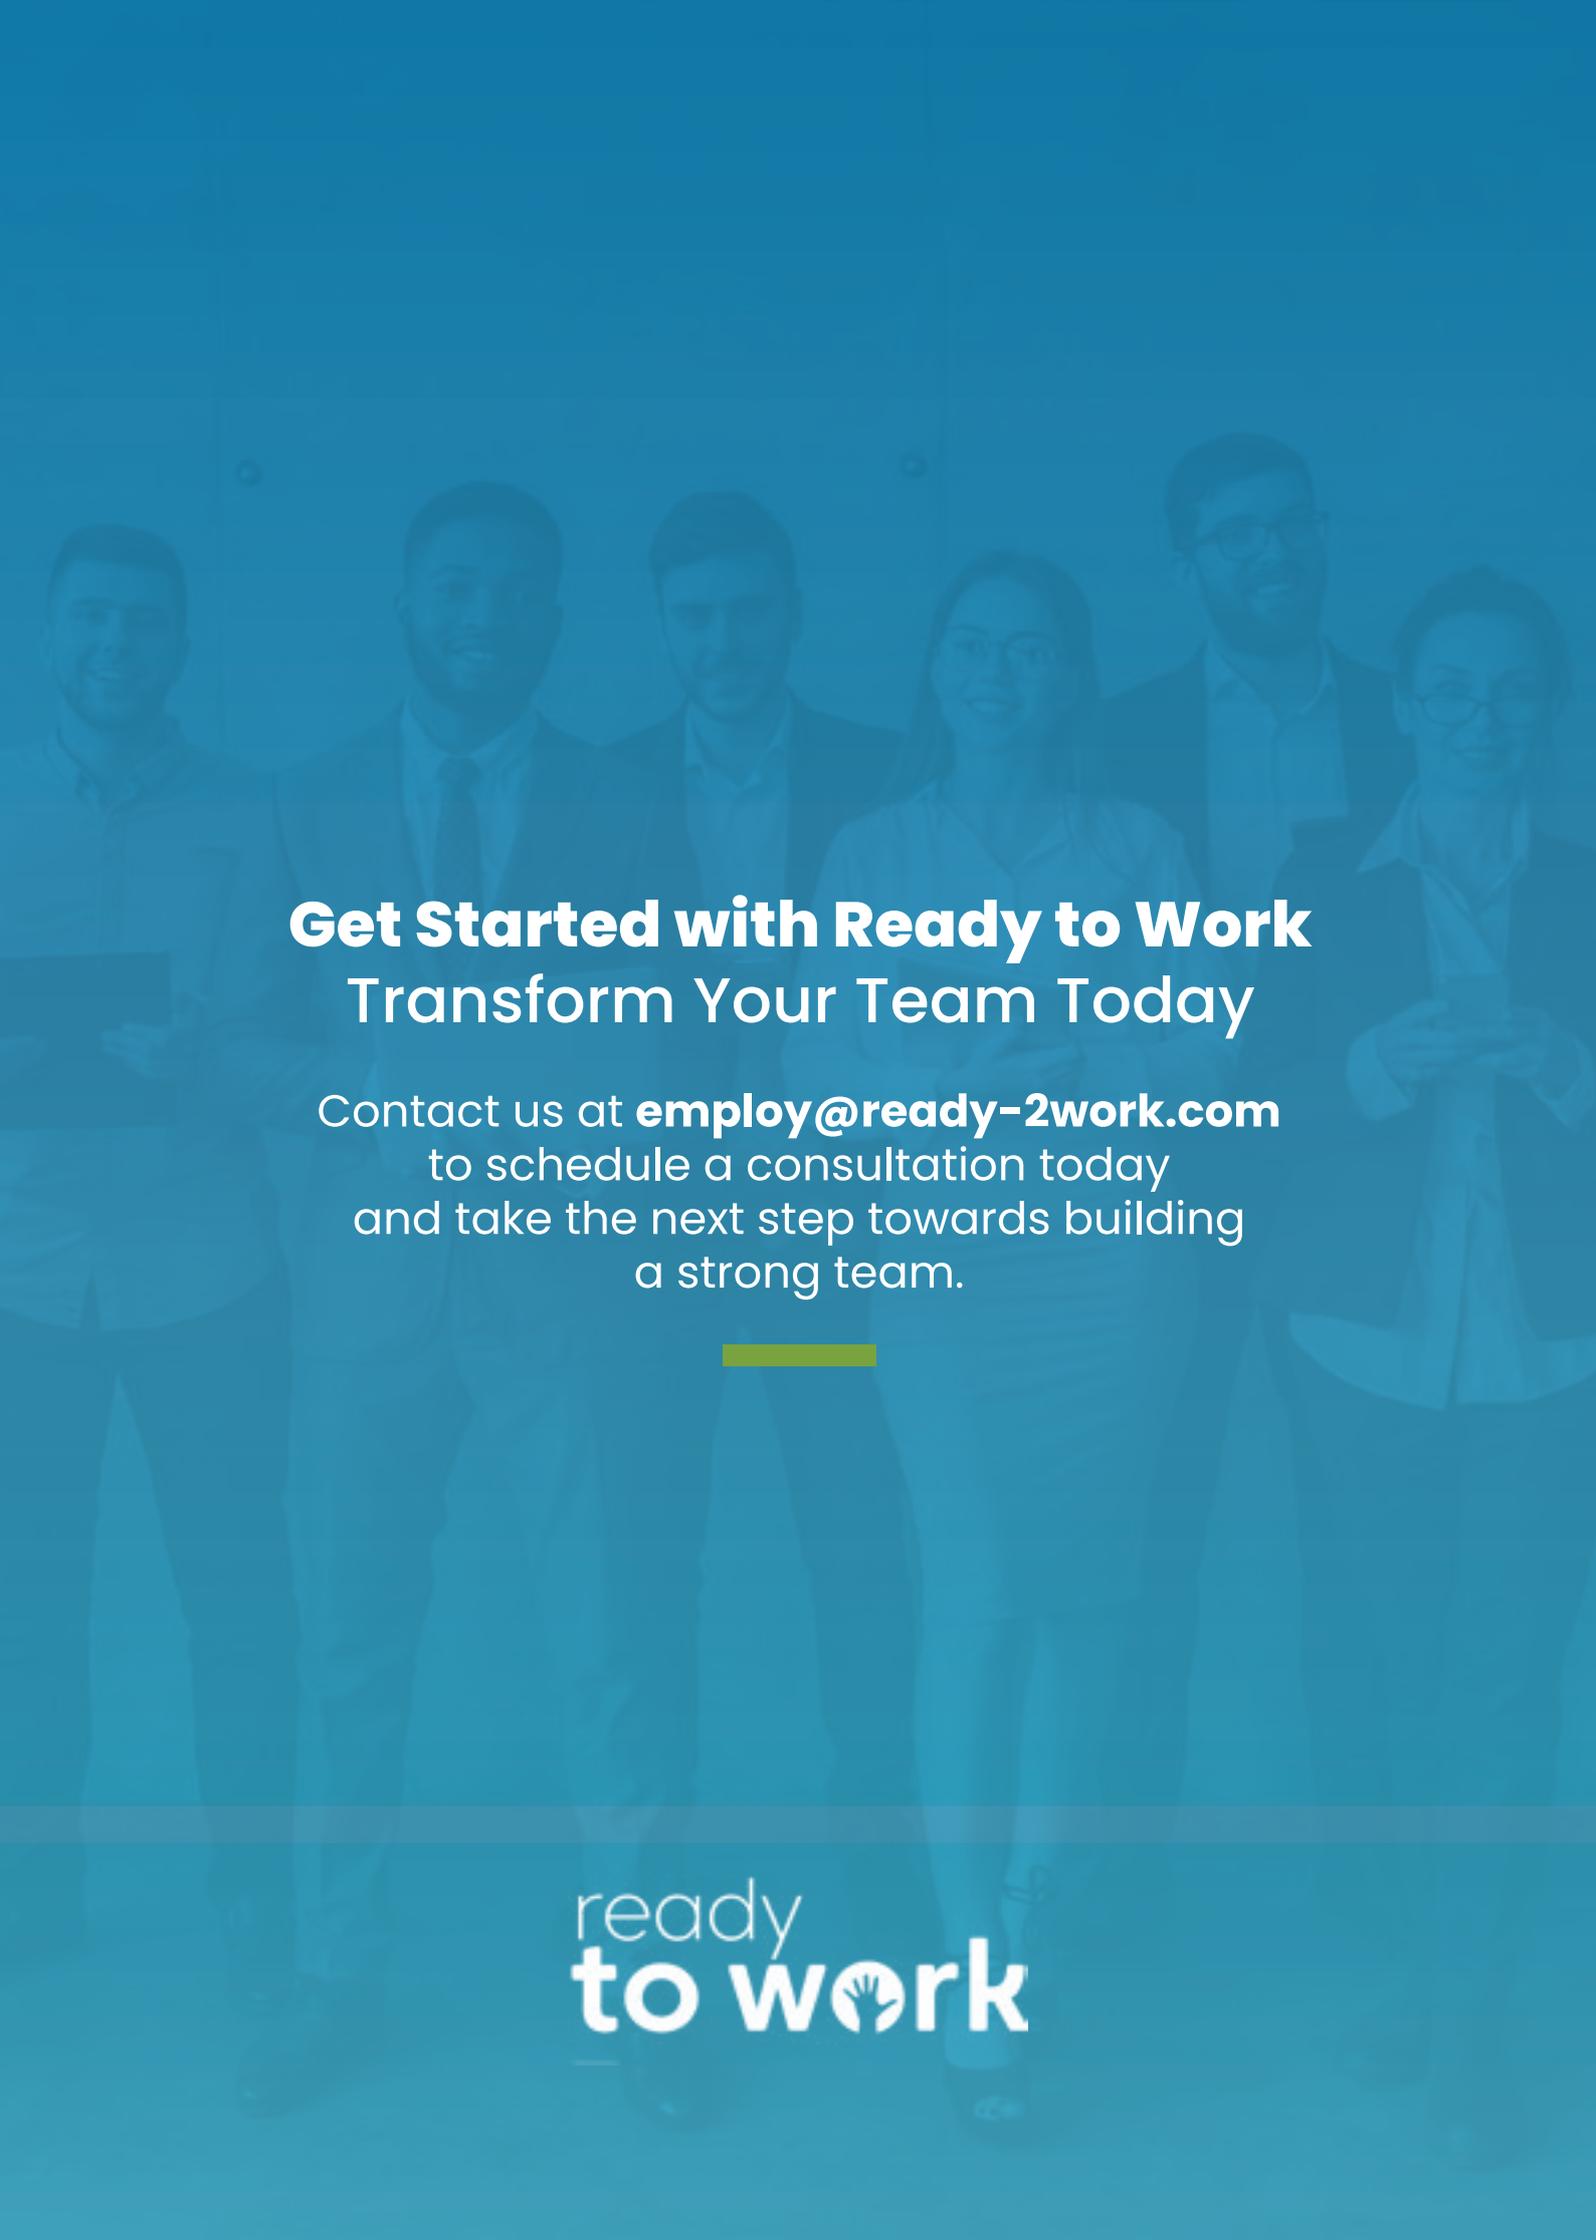

Implementation Process:

Results and Impact

The Ready to Work Program yielded significant results for LAMC. Many individuals successfully completed the program and secured positions within LAMC. Candidates from Ready to Work demonstrated higher retention rates compared to other programs. Hiring managers were impressed by their hands-on experience, nationally-recognized certifications, essential soft skills, and uniform, comparable resume documents. Overall, LAMC's partnership with Ready to Work effectively addressed their talent acquisition challenges.

The program's four-step implementation process streamlined the recruitment and training of qualified candidates, contributing to a diverse and skilled healthcare workforce at LAMC.
